Introduction

The history and archaeology of non-royal women of Ancient Egypt,[1] and more specifically of the Middle Kingdom and the Second Intermediate Period,[2] have been the topic of numerous studies. However, the comprehensive prosopographic tool designed for presenting dossiers for recorded individuals in which women's monuments and their attestations are grouped together, is still missing.

This work is complementary to D. Franke's Personendaten aus dem Mittleren Reich (Wiesbaden 1984),[3] establishing sets of data for women known from more than one source, in respect to the type and arrangement of data, chronological time-span (12th to 17th Dynasty), and graphical pattern. The 430 entries are alphabetically arranged, with a basic selection of information on objects linked to particular individuals.

The process of identification of an individual usually starts with name, title, and if applicable, kin terms. However, as stated several times by various authors,[4] a match of name and titles does not automatically mean that we are dealing with the same person. What has been stated above is even more obvious with female dossiers, especially having in mind the limited corpus of feminine titles. Among the more than one hundred attestations of nbt pr z3t-ḥrḥr it is probable that some of them are referring to single individuals, but without any kin link the affiliation to the dossier cannot be established. On the other hand, even with the kin link, it is not always possible to connect the sources to the 'X individual'. For example, 'sixty-eight ladies' termed as snb mst.n rn.s-snb were active during the 13th Dynasty. Are all of them independent from each other? Or would it perhaps be possible to assign at least some of the records to one individual? It is not possible to decide even with a minimum of certainty.

In most cases women's dossiers are detected due to their family connections (i.e. they were termed as mothers, wives, daughters, sisters), and genealogical data. The data referring to the dossiers of their male family members are provided in the bibliography. In some cases the proposed identification was based solely on the names of the person and her mother (and they should be treated with reservation), or on the fact that women with the same name were attested on the objects already assigned to the dossier by Franke,[5] Grajetzki-Stefanović,[6] Franke-Marée[7] or Ilin-Tomich.[8]

The dossiers presented here are far from being complete, especially in respect to their number. Many Middle Kingdom women attested in diverse documents are still to be identified and the author hopes that within the next few years the second volume of the 'female dossiers' can be published.
